Thank you for your request for information, about phone calls between Secretary of State Owen Paterson MP and Irish Agriculture Minister Simon Coveney from January 2013 to the present date, which we received on 9 September. As you know, we have handled your request under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA).

Following careful consideration, we have decided not to disclose some of this information.

The remainder of the information requested is being withheld as it falls under the exemptions in sections 27 and 30 of the FOIA, which relate to international relations and investigations and proceedings conducted by public authorities respectively.

In applying these exemptions we have had to balance the public interest in withholding the information against the public interest in disclosure.

We recognise that there is a public interest in disclosure of information concerning the detail of exchanges between Secretary of State Owen Paterson MP and Irish Agriculture Minister Simon Coveney during the phone calls listed above. The effectiveness of information sharing between the UK and Ireland during the horsemeat incident is an issue which the public are interested in, as is information relating to the investigations into the source of the fraud.

On the other hand, there is a strong public interest in withholding the information because these were confidential discussions between the two Ministers and both would have understood them to be confidential to enable open and frank discussion. Disclosure could damage the good working relationship between the two states at Ministerial and official level, prejudicing the future supply and exchange of information between the two Governments which is necessary for the effective conduct of foreign policy in general, or in other policy areas where a mutual interest emerges. There is also a strong public interest in withholding information which relates to active criminal investigations as disclosure could prejudice the integrity of certain investigations, diminishing the chances of successful prosecution.

Therefore, we have concluded that, in all the circumstances of the case, the information should be withheld.

In keeping with the spirit and effect of the FOIA, and in keeping with the government's Transparency Agenda, all information is assumed to be releasable to the public unless exempt. Therefore, the information released to you will now be published on www.gov.uk together with any related information that will provide a key to its wider context. Please note that this will not include your personal data.

I attach Annex A, which explains the copyright that applies to the information being released to you. I also attach Annex B giving contact details should you be unhappy with the service you have received.

Yours
