Dear Sirs,

I am a publican currently working with Enterprise Inns having recently taken over the [redacted] in

For us to own/run this particular building and business, would cost us in the region of £250,000, money which we could never dream of getting our hands on. We are currently thoroughly enjoying being here and so far we seem to have had a relatively successful start to our careers in the industry.

It is something we have considered doing for a while, but without Enterprise Inns and the pubco model, there is no way it would ever have become a reality.

Im sure that there are lots more people like me who do, or would like to, run their own pub businesses, but without the current model would never be able to afford to do so and I feel that it is important that the model remains in place, and helps people to realise the opportunity to run their own business.

Thank you.
