

Dear Sirs,

I would like my views considered as part of the consultation on radio active waste.

- 1) I believe it to be of the utmost irresponsibility to even consider new nuclear power stations while we still do not have a solution to the question of what to do with stock pile of previous waste.
- 2) The local people in the area of Cumbria selected to house this waste have stated that they don't want this waste and yet the wider council is now being asked to vote on the issue. How is this democratic.
- 3) The public are assured that this is a totally fresh start, and it is a national invitation to anyone who wishes to host the nuclear waste under their land. This is not true and the problem owner, DECC is also one of the three who will make the final decision. It is a pretence and will be a top down decision.
- 4) Given that some of this waste is weapons grade, not enough has been done. to make the public aware of the security necessary to keep this safe from terrorist not only during storage but during transportation.
- 5) I do not believe that this is a consultation to find out how the public feels but rather one to find out how it is best sold to the public.
- 6) Given that the government have declined to consider moving Trident from Faslane to Plymouth because of the number of people at Plymouth, it would seem that the proposed site must be an area occupied by less than xxx, 000 people? I would ask what number of people are deemed to be expendable? And how much will their elected council leaders accept in order to forget that their safety and the safety of their environment matters? Sounds like bribery to me.
