

Hi

In short, I don't think that you should be burying the highly radioactive waste underground at all; it's like sticking our heads in the sand, sweeping the radioactive material under the rug so to speak.

It should be recycled as fuel, the technology for this already exists and both China and India are making headway in recycling materials while the UK continues to lag behind.

Michael