

372.

From: -
Sent: 28 May 2013 15:10
To: Pubs Consultation Responses
Subject: code of practice
<!--[if !vml]--><!--[endif]-->

22nd May 2013

To whom it may concern,

Great, another bright idea from our leaders!

"a statutory code of practice" So they want to make life more difficult with more "red tape" for the very people who have weathered the storm. I believe the pub industry has been crucified by lack of Government legislation in the last 20 years, by allowing these so called Pubcos/real estate investors, to buy up our much loved Brewery trade.

Those that have weathered the storm are the very people who already have their own standards/code of practice in place, the proof being...they're still here!

The code being suggested is too late for those it is aimed at. Don't make more work for everybody.

They've had our phone box, village school, post office, & local petrol station, please leave the Breweries alone otherwise it will be the last of the village green
& the good old world famous British Pub.

I have been a Tenant with [redacted] I am very pleased with The friendly way they look after me, my pub and customers. The [redacted] agreement works absolutely fine and the Brewery have been happy to invest in my pub in several ways.

Regards

This email was received from the INTERNET.

Communications via the GSi may be automatically logged, monitored and/or recorded for legal purposes.

02/12/2013