The Armed Forces Covenant

An Enduring Covenant Between

The People of the United Kingdom
Her Majesty's Government

And

All those who serve or have served in the Armed Forces of the Crown

And their Families

The first duty of Government is the defence of the realm. Our Armed Forces fulfil that responsibility on behalf of the Government, sacrificing some civilian freedoms, facing danger and, sometimes, suffering serious injury or death as a result of their duty. Families also play a vital role in supporting the operational effectiveness of our Armed Forces. In return, the whole nation has a moral obligation to the members of the Naval Service, the Army and the Royal Air Force, together with their families. They deserve our respect and support, and fair treatment.

Those who serve in the Armed Forces, whether Regular or Reserve, those who have served in the past, and their families, should face no disadvantage compared to other citizens in the provision of public and commercial services. Special consideration is appropriate in some cases, especially for those who have given most such as the injured and the bereaved.

This obligation involves the whole of society: it includes voluntary and charitable bodies, private organisations, and the actions of individuals in supporting the Armed Forces. Recognising those who have performed military duty unites the country and demonstrates the value of their contribution. This has no greater expression than in upholding this Covenant.

- Seeking to support the employment of veterans young and old through;

 - Always considering offering interviews to veterans, young and old, if they meet the selection criteria laid out in the job advert. This would not constitute the guarantee of a job, but rather the offer of an opportunity to prove themselves in an interview
 - Recognise military skills and qualifications when interviewing for new positions.
- Striving to support the employment of Service spouses and partners through;
 - Focussing our recruiting effort on the Armed Forces community, such as advertising through 'service-friendly' recruitment agencies and Service charities
 - Always considering offering an interview to spouses / partners if they meet the selection criteria laid out in a job advert. This would not constitute the guarantee of a job, but rather the offer of an opportunity to prove themselves in an interview

- Committing to attempting to find alternate employment within the business in another location if relocation is required to accompany their partner
- Endeavouring to offer a degree of flexibility in granting leave for Service spouses and partners before, during and after a partner's deployment through;
 - Looking sympathetically on requests for holidays before, during or after a partner's overseas deployment, when the Service person has to leave to spend time with their family
 - Consider whether special paid leave is appropriate for employees who are bereaved or whose loved ones are injured
- Seeking to support our employees who choose to be members of the Reserve forces, including by accommodating their training and deployment where possible through;
 - Encouraging any reservists in the business to participate in Uniform to Work Day
 - Accommodating our reservists' training commitments wherever possible
 - Accommodating the mobilisation of our reservists if they are required to deploy

 - Encouraging our employees to be cadet helpers or instructors

2.2. We will publicise these commitments through our literature and/or on our website, setting out how we will seek to honour them and inviting feedback from the Service community and our customers on how we are doing.
