- The Director of Information and Data Services gave a verbal update on the care.data programme, which had been the subject of recent media articles. A mail-shot to all households in England was being planned to allow enough time for patients to register any objections with their GPs, concerning sharing of their medical data. A helpline was also being set up to assist this process. A programme director had been appointed who was working with NHS England on developing the business case and the requirements. HSCIC and NHS England teams were working together on care.data communications. A paper would be presented to the next Board meeting in December and given the complexity of the subject the Board requested that a care.data update be tabled at each subsequent Board meeting.

The Director of Clinical and Public Engagement noted that a number of information governance issues, in respect to programmes, were currently guiding a red customer satisfaction KPI. This was largely because the organisation did not yet have a systematic approach to measuring this indicator.
- Busting Bureaucracy Campaign: The CEO informed the Board that the NHS Confederation report on reducing burden was now available and that the HSCICs work with trusts had concluded, the outcomes of the audits were being written up. The Director of Information and Data Services was attending a meeting on 23 October with the Secretary of State and the NHS Confederation to discuss the next steps.
- An Informatics Services Commissioning Group (ISCG) meeting had been held on 22 October at which a commissioning framework for the group had been agreed, this would have an impact on HSCIC business planning. Other items on the agenda had been the outcome of a request to Arm's Length Bodies regarding their priorities for informatics; a system for replacing the Information Standards Board had been agreed; an outline for health and social care digital services; and a review of accountability and governance arrangements which would include the role of the ISCG and allocation of funding.
