Barring – Making a referral
Barring decisions

We make fair, consistent and thorough barring decisions, which are an appropriate response to the harm that has occurred, as well as the risk of harm posed.

We are acutely aware of the impact barring or not barring can have, both to the individual under consideration and those who they have, or could have, come into contact with.

Employers must refer an individual to DBS if they:
- dismissed them from working in regulated activity because they have harmed someone while at work
- dismissed or removed them from working in regulated activity because they might have harmed someone while at work
- were planning to dismiss them for either of these reasons, but the individual resigned first

It is a legal requirement that you refer an individual to DBS if any of the above circumstances apply.

For more information on making a referral or regulated activity, please go to the DBS website, www.gov.uk/dbs or call our barring helpline on 01325 953795 for further information.

Making a referral

Referrals are made to us when an employer or organisation has permanently removed an individual from regulated activity, either because that person has caused harm, or poses a future risk of harm to children or vulnerable groups.

In these circumstances, the employer must make a referral to DBS.

Where a person or organisation has a legal duty to refer, there are two main conditions which should be met:

1. they have permanently removed a person from regulated activity through dismissal or permanent transfer from regulated activity (or would have if the person had not left, resigned, retired or been made redundant); and

2. they believe the person has either:
   a. engaged in relevant conduct
   b. satisfied the ‘harm test’ (i.e. no action or inaction occurred, but the present risk that it could was significant)
   c. received a caution or conviction for a relevant offence (a list of these offences is available on the DBS website, or by calling the helpline for advice)

You are legally required to make a barring referral directly to DBS, even if you have already raised it with another body, for example, General Medical Council (GMC) or Local Authority Designated Officer (LADO).
How cases come to us

1. autobars - there are two types of automatic barring cases where a person has been cautioned or convicted for a relevant offence:
   a. automatic barring offences (without the right to make representations) will result in the person being included in one or both barred lists by DBS, irrespective of whether they have, are, or may in the future engage in regulated activity
   b. automatic barring offences (with the right to make representations) may also result in the person being placed on one or both barred lists. This will be subject to whether DBS believes that the person has engaged, is engaging or may in future engage in regulated activity, and the consideration of any representations they make

2. disclosure information - where a person has applied for a disclosure check to work with children or vulnerable groups, with a check of one or both barred lists, and their certificate reveals they have relevant criminal information

3. referrals from an organisation that has a legal duty or power to make referrals to DBS - there is a duty on employers to make a referral to DBS when they have dismissed or removed an employee from working in regulated activity, following harm to a child or vulnerable adult, or where there is a risk of harm

A referral should not be made at the point of allegation. The person or organisation that would normally refer to DBS should carry out an investigation and gather evidence (for example, as part of an internal disciplinary process), to establish if the allegation has grounds. Without evidence or substance to the claims, many allegations will be quickly closed down, as there will be no foundation on which DBS can proceed.

Information on the referral duty for other groups can be found on the DBS website, www.gov.uk/dbs or call our helpline on 01325 953795 for further information.
Making a referral decision guide

1) Are you any of the following?
   - Group A
     - Regulated activity provider
     - Personnel supplier
   - Group B
     - Local authority
     - Education and Library Board (NI)
     - Health & Social Care (HSC) Trust
     - Keeper of Register
     - Supervisory authority

2) Was the person working (paid or unpaid) in regulated activity?

3) Have you carried out an investigation to establish the facts and gather evidence?

4) Have the allegations been found to be substantiated?

5) Has the person you are considering referring been removed, redeployed (because they caused harm to a child or vulnerable adult), or resigned from regulated activity?

6) If you are in Group A (see 1), you have a legal duty to refer the person to DBS. If you are in Group B (see 1), you can also, if appropriate, make a referral to DBS. Please complete the referral form on our website, supplying the information requested. You may also need to report it to a regulator, registered body, keeper of register, or supervisory authority.

If you are not in one of the groups listed above, you do not have a duty to refer. If you still have concerns, please contact their employer, social services, or the police, as appropriate.

If the person was not working in regulated activity there is no duty to refer to DBS.

You should follow your local safeguarding and disciplinary procedures in the first instance to ensure that the facts have been established and the evidence has been collected. Then consider whether the person should be referred after your internal investigations.

If allegations have been found to be unsubstantiated and the person has not been removed from regulated activity, there is no duty to refer.

Do you still have safeguarding concerns about the person?

No further action required.

You can refer to DBS with the relevant information to support your concerns. Please complete the referral form on our website, supplying the information requested.

If you still have serious safeguarding concerns, regardless of the outcome of this decision guide, please call our barring helpline on 01325 953795 for further guidance.
