A) Vision (p.1 of 2)

Our Coalition Government is determined to help reduce the inequalities of opportunity we see around the world today. We believe that promoting global prosperity is both a moral duty and in our national interest.

Whether you are talking about drug-resistant disease, combating climate change, economic stability, migration or conflict, development represents tremendous value for money. In short, it is good for our economy, our safety, our health and our future. That is why we have delivered on our commitment to spend 0.7% of gross national income in aid from 2013 – and promise to enshrine it in law.

In the current financial climate, we have a particular duty to show that we are achieving value for every pound of taxpayers' money that we spend on development. Results, transparency and accountability will be our watchwords and will guide everything we do. Aid is only ever a means to an end, never an end in itself. It is wealth creation and sustainable growth that will help people to lift themselves out of poverty. We welcome and encourage the creativity that the private sector can offer, and will work with business to open new markets, extend access to financial services, stimulate new technology and create new jobs.

We want to see girls and women, who so often hold the key to development, becoming empowered members of their communities. We will work to strengthen women's voice and engagement in decision making. We will strengthen health systems and family planning facilities so that women can plan their families and receive treatment before, during and after childbirth. We have committed to reducing the burden of malaria in the developing world and will play our full part in ensuring that the world's poor have access to education, healthcare, water and sanitation and other basic services. Our funding through multilateral bodies, such as the United Nations and the World Bank, will enable us to extend the scope and reach of our aid but will be based on the effectiveness of what they do, value for money and the results they achieve.

A) Vision (p.2 of 2)

We will concentrate our efforts on supporting achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, creating wealth in poor countries, strengthening their governance and security and tackling climate change. The prize, in doing so, is huge: a better life for millions of people, and a safer, more prosperous world for Britain.

Andrew Mitchell, Secretary of State for International Development

B) Coalition Priorities

Structural Reform Priorities

1. Honour international commitments

- Honour the UK's international commitments and support actions to achieve the Millennium Development Goals

2. Introduce transparency in aid

- Make British aid more effective by improving transparency and value for money

3. Boost wealth creation

- Make British international development policy more focused on boosting economic growth and wealth creation

4. Strengthen governance and security in fragile and conflict-affected countries

- Improve the coherence and performance of British international development policy in fragile and conflict-affected countries, with a particular focus on Afghanistan and Pakistan

5. Lead international action to improve the lives of girls and women

- Work to empower and educate girls, recognise the role of women in development and help to ensure that healthy mothers can raise strong children

6. Combat climate change

- Drive urgent action to tackle climate change, and support adaptation and low carbon growth in developing countries

B) Coalition Priorities

Other major responsibilities

Respond to humanitarian disasters

- Ensure that the basic needs of people whose lives have been ruined by disaster (whether natural or conflict-driven) are met, and ensure that emergency relief aid is targeted at those areas where threat to life is most severe, extent and depth of suffering greatest, and response capacities of communities and authorities most limited

Deliver on obligations to the Overseas Territories

- Help to provide an improved environment for economic and social development and promote self-sustainability

Influence the global development system

- Work with the international system, Whitehall, multilateral organisations and emerging economies to ensure coordinated worldwide action to deliver international development goals

B) Coalition Priorities

The Department will no longer...

...support projects that are failing to perform. This money will be redirected to programmes that are better placed to combat poverty

...spend as much money on marketing and communications. For example, we will phase out the Development Awareness Fund

...provide substantial aid to countries that do not need it.

DFID has completed three thorough reviews of its bilateral, multilateral and emergency response programmes to eliminate lower priority spending and waste. These savings will be redirected to priority countries and programmes where the impact will be greater.

C) Structural Reform Plan

The Coalition is committed to a programme of reform that will turn government on its head. We want to bring about a power shift, taking power away from Whitehall and putting it into the hands of people and communities, and a horizon shift, making the decisions that will equip Britain for long term success. For too long citizens have been treated as passive recipients of centralised, standardised services. This Government is putting citizens back in charge, and Structural Reform Plans are part of this shift of power from government to people.

This section sets out how, and when, the Department will achieve the reforms that are needed to make this happen. Structural Reform Plans are key tools for holding departments to account for the implementation of Programme for Government commitments, replacing the old top-down systems of targets and central micromanagement.

Each month, the Department publishes a simple report on its progress in meeting these commitments. These reports are available on our departmental website and on the Number 10 website.

All legislative timings and subsequent actions are subject to Parliamentary timetable and approval.

This section sets out how the Department is spending taxpayers' money as clearly and transparently as possible.

We have included a table to show the Department's planned expenditure over the Spending Review Period, as agreed with the Treasury. It is split into money spent on administration (including the cost of running departments themselves), programmes (including the frontline), and capital (for instance new buildings and equipment).

This section also includes a bubble chart setting out further detail how its settlement will be allocated for the 2011/12 financial year, across its key programmes and activities.

Common Areas of Spend

This data aims to let the public compare DfID operations against other public and private sector organisations, by setting out the cost of common operational areas against common data standards. Here, departments are setting out historical data from 2009/10 to form a baseline for future updates.

In 2009/10, DfID...
...employed 1,573.1 full-time equivalent (FTE) people; was unable to provide a figure for temporary staff and had an average staff cost of £47,701
...had a total estate of 24,078sqm with a cost of £10m equating to a cost per FTE of £6,356
...procured goods and services with a cost of £534.6m with third party suppliers, and were able to provide detailed categorisation for 100% of this
...had no major projects
...spent £17.6m with third party suppliers on ICT and had an average cost of desktop per FTE of £1,174
... annually managed expenditure of £354.7m to which CDC and IFFIM were the major contributors
... spent £113.4m on staff pay
...spent £19.95m on the HR, Finance, Procurement and Communications aspects of Corporate Services
...identified £260,771 of Fraud
... spent £630m to/through non-governmental organisations within the UK and overseas.

During the baseline year, few of the data standards above were available for consistent comparison across government. So historical data has not always been prepared on a consistent basis. Departments have set out caveats and exceptions that explain how their data fits with the common standard, and are critical to understanding this data. We are working to improve substantially the quality of data and particularly consistency across departments.

More detailed data, the caveats, definitions and supplementary information is available in Annex A. In future, we will publish updates to this information as part of our regular reporting of business plan data.

E) Transparency

Transparency is key to improved outcomes and productivity in our public services. Public reporting of data promotes higher quality and more efficient services, choice and accountability. Transparency is a driver of economic growth because it enables the development of tools to support users, commissioners and providers of public services.

This section sets out how departments will publish information that will allow taxpayers to assess the efficiency and productivity of public services, holding them more effectively to account. The commitments in this section will be kept under continuous review – it is essential that public services are consistently pro-active in publishing information to help citizens make the best decisions and routinely appraise their success in delivering meaningful transparency to their users.

This Business Plan makes commitments to the publication of key data sets that will improve the transparency of the public service – at the same time, it commits to providing data that is of good quality so that it can be used for effective comparison and to publishing this information in such a way so that it is as accessible as possible. In addition, departments are expected to work with data users to promote awareness of new data sets as they are published so that they become the focus of innovation and enterprise.

In most cases, the data will be available free of charge.

Information strategy (p.1 of 4)

DFID is committed to being a global leader on transparency. DFID regards transparency as fundamental to improving its accountability to UK citizens and to improving accountability to citizens in the countries in which it works. The transparency agenda will also help us achieve our goal of delivering more value for money in the programmes we deliver. Greater transparency will improve the effectiveness of aid in reducing poverty.

We will implement the Government's commitments on transparency and maintain our existing reporting obligations laid out in the International Development (Reporting and Transparency) Act 2006. We will also continue to report full details of our aid programme to the OECD in line with the DAC Statistical Reporting Directives. But we will go further and faster.

We remain committed to strengthening statistical systems in developing countries to improve the quality, availability and use of data. We will continue to support this at both the country level where we build capacity in national statistics systems and at the international level where we work with multilaterals to deliver statistical support to developing countries and improve international monitoring of the MDGs.

Our information strategy is based on:

- The Prime Minister's government-wide transparency commitments and commitments under the International Aid Transparency Initiative (IATI)
- The UK Aid Transparency Guarantee, which commits DFID to making our aid fully transparent to citizens in both the UK and developing countries
- Extensive internal and external consultations, including with external opinion leaders on aid transparency, such as MySociety, Publish What You Fund and Development Initiatives

Information strategy (p.2 of 4)

All work on transparency will be taken forward at Board level by Richard Calvert, Director General for Corporate Performance.

We will publish the following new information online:

- Full information on all new DFID projects over £500 (from Jan 2011) including those funded through the tri-departmental Conflict Pool and managed by DFID
- Expand the project data included in our new project database to be in line with international best practice, providing more detail and more frequent updates
- Make our data and information more accessible by changing the format of the information we publish, including through revised project documentation and country business plan formats
- Online details for all new tender documents for contracts over £10,000 (from Sep 2010)
- Names, job titles and annual pay rates for Directors and above (from Oct 2010)
- Organisational structures covering all of the Senior Civil Service (from Oct 2010)

We will publish our data in a more accessible format through data.gov.uk. This will enable others to combine it with data from other donors to create maps, graphs and other visualisations that help show, for example, aid flows to specific countries.

In releasing this information we will continue to respect issues of data protection, commercial confidentiality and security. All published data will be in line with the Public Data Principles and registered on data.gov.uk. Data we use that comes from other organisations will go through rigorous internal quality assurance.

Information strategy (p.3 of 4)

We will continue to look at our own internal management information to establish what else we can publish.

Transparency is an important principle for DFID in its own right, but it is also an important principle for our partners to work towards. We are working to integrate transparency within partners that we fund, by:

- Leading on the International Aid Transparency Initiative (IATI) to improve the international consistency of aid reporting and its suitability at country level
- Requiring, over time, any civil society organisation that is in direct receipt of DFID funds to adhere to similar standards of transparency and accountability, and pushing multilateral organisations to do the same
- Pressing other donors – bilateral, multilateral and non-traditional – to adhere to similar standards of transparency as set out in the International Aid Transparency Initiative (IATI)

We will continue to press other UK government departments who provide ODA or who we have joint programmes with (such as the Conflict Pool), to adhere to similar standards of transparency as set out in IATI.

In order to increase the effectiveness and value for money throughout the delivery chain, we will also work to improve accessibility. We are committed to working at the country and international level to improve the availability, quality and use of data in order to drive effectiveness.

Information strategy (p.4 of 4)

Making information about aid spending easier to access, use and understand means that UK taxpayers and citizens in poor countries can more easily hold DFID and recipient governments to account for using aid money wisely. Transparency creates better feedback from beneficiaries to donors and taxpayers, and helps us better understand what works and what doesn't.

Delivering this agenda will require a fundamental cultural and structural shift in DFID's processes, and we are working to embed transparency across the whole organisation.

Input indicators

The indicators set out in this section are only a small subset of the data gathered by the Department which will be made transparently available as outlined in the Information Strategy. Where appropriate we will include a proportionate share of our core contributions to multilateral organisations in the input figures. Full details of DFID bilateral and multilateral inputs by sector is published in Statistics on International Development. The Department will adopt the following indicators to help the public scrutinise our inputs:

Input indicator	When will publication start?	How often will it be published?	How will this be broken down?
Cost per child supported in primary education	July 2011	Annual	By country
Average unit price of long-lasting insecticide treated bed nets procured	July 2011	Annual	By multilateral organisation
Cost per person of providing sustainable access to an improved sanitation facility with DFID support	July 2011	Annual	By country or by multilateral organisation
Cost per person of improving access to financial services	July 2011	Annual	By country or by multilateral organisation
DFID spend on elections	Ongoing	Quarterly	By country or by multilateral organisation

DFID spend through multilateral organisations (e.g. United Nations)	Ongoing	Quarterly	By multilateral organisation

Note that the costs presented here are only a proxy for the actual unit cost of delivering the outputs and outcomes described.

Impact indicators

It is essential that the impact of the UK's work on development is demonstrated in terms of outcomes it achieves. The indicators listed below reflect this multi-faceted approach to poverty reduction and are indicative of the breadth of work in which DFID is engaged. Our full portfolio will be made available as detailed in the information strategy. Where appropriate we will include a proportionate share of multilateral results.
